Overview

The customer is a property management software provider serving hotel properties across Europe. Its platform runs day-to-day hotel operations, from bookings to billing.

From 1 January 2026, Belgium made structured B2B e-invoicing mandatory over the Peppol network. The provider needed compliance built into its own product, as a native feature its hotel customers never have to think about. This is the story of how it delivered exactly that with ClearTax.

What was the requirement?

The provider wanted to offer e-invoicing as part of its own platform, under its own brand. That meant carrying real compliance complexity without turning into a compliance company. Its product team is built to run hotels, not to track Peppol specifications.

Several issues sat underneath that goal:

- The property management system had no built-in e-invoicing capability.
- The team needed support with Peppol specifications, access points and routing.
- Each hotel customer had its own VAT registration and configuration.
- The solution needed to support Belgium and future EU mandates.
- The team needed one central view to track invoice delivery.

The consequences of getting it wrong

A gap in the product

Without built-in compliance, customers would have to find their own e-invoicing tools, weakening the platform they came for.

Rejected e-invoices

Without correct Peppol validation and mapping, invoices risked failing at the receiving access point and never reaching the buyer.

Manual work at scale

Without automation, every customer would fall back on manual steps, adding operational load month after month.

A slower route to new markets

Without a scalable design, each new EU country would mean building compliance again from the start.

How ClearTax helped

ClearTax embedded its Unified API into the platform, so e-invoicing became a native feature. The provider kept control of onboarding and VAT setup. ClearTax carried the Peppol complexity underneath.

As a registered Peppol Access Point, ClearTax handled every invoice end to end. It mapped the data, validated it against Peppol BIS 3.0, and transmitted it to the buyer. One API covered Belgium and is built to extend across the EU.

When access point issues appeared, ClearTax fixed each one.

More Than a Mandate Met

For the provider, this was never only about one country's deadline. It was about turning a regulatory burden into a feature its customers value, delivered through a partner that carries the complexity and stays close long after go-live.
